What Lower Brule Has To Offer

The Lower Brule Indian Reservation is located in central South Dakota along the west bank of the Missouri River. The topography of the Reservation is characterized by rugged breaks adjacent to the Missouri River that gradually give way to gently undulating prairie. Grasslands dominate the landscape but agriculture is prevalent in areas that are conducive. This diversity of habitat is ideal for many species of wildlife.

The hunting opportunities that exist on the Lower Brule Indian Reservation are second to none. Prairie-chickens and sharp-tailed grouse are abundant. Exceptional mule deer and white-tailed deer are harvested annually. Pheasant hunting is world class. The Reservation is located within the Central Flyway and at times holds over one hundred thousand ducks and geese are staging in the area. Wild turkeys, which were extinct for decades, have been successfully re-introduced and are flourishing. Buffalo and elk have also been successfully re-introduced and provide a unique hunting experience.

The Lower Brule Sioux Tribe Department of Wildlife, Fish and Recreation has been actively managing the wildlife resources and improving habitat on the Reservation for over 30 years. Population surveys are conducted annually on all game species. At the end of the hunting seasons, all hunters are sent questionnaires and asked to provide information that helps biologists determine harvest rates of game species. This information is used to develop recommendations for the following hunting season. Thousands of trees and hundreds of acres of food plots are planted annually. In addition, thousands of acres of marginal cropland have been restored to prairie in the last decade. Few agencies are managing wildlife at the level of the Lower Brule Sioux Tribe. Ask us about our two rustic fully accommodated cabins overlooking the Missouri River. Included are a full kitchen, two bedrooms, deck, dog kennel, fish and bird cleaning table – this is a great way to maximize your experience at Lower Brule while fishing or hunting.

Lower Brule is hunting at its best. For more information, please contact the Lower Brule Sioux Tribe Department of Wildlife, Fish and Recreation at (605) 473-5666 or visit our website, www.lowerbrulewildlife.com.
